Shark-Boy receives the Sebastian Berk Award for Water Polo. When asked how he found the opposition, he replied, 'Delicious'.

Invisible Boy holds the Intergalactic Challenge Cup aloft for the fifth successive year. And for the fifth successive year he is arrested for pinching it out of the winners dressing room.

Old boy, Frozen Chicken Man, presents the prizes on graduation day. Later, he very kindly donated his left leg to the buffet.

Fly Girl! setting the School High Jump Record on sports day.

A scene from the school play 'Hamlet' starring 'Goldfish Boy'.

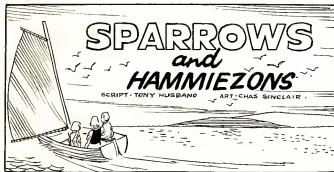

This robot was Grange Hole's winning entry for the Uranus Science Competition. The fact that the robot was one hundred and fifty feet high and carried a primed nuclear warhead in its chest had no influence on the judges' decision whatsoever.

OINK'S HOLIDAY SURVIVAL KIT!

Even when you're not at school you can have problems! Generous of Uncle Pigg presents a kit to help you through holiday hassles! Simply stick the pages onto thin card and cut around the dotted lines!

NOTE — Use double-sided sticky tape to attach items to your body or face. Nails or staples will cause more problems than they solve!

NEWSPAPER CUTTINGS —

Do you always spend your holidays somewhere dull, and never end up where you want to go? Not any more! Write in the name of the place you don't want to visit on cutting (A), and the name of your dream holiday resort on cutting (B), then leave them around where your parents can see them!

INSTANT 'TRAVEL-SICKNESS' —

Stick this to your jumper, and parents won't want to take you on those tedious day-trips in the car (they might want to take you to the hospital, though).

POLICE BADGE —

Wear this at all times when you're abroad! Just the thing for getting parents off the hook when they're arrested for driving on the wrong side of the road!

DRACULA FANGS —

Wear these to scare off the thousands of kids in front of you in the queues for cinema, swimming pools, boating lakes etc. But don't blame us if people take you to task for queue-jumping!

HAPPY GRIN —

Stick this to your mush when you're on the Big Dipper or Ghost Train. You'll look tough and casual, even if you're really terrified!

Turns any noise into music.

ADVERTISEMENT

With a Casio Sampling keyboard making noise into music couldn't be simpler. Or more fun.

Just record any sound from any noise using the built-in mike.

It could be you or the budgie singing, the cat miaowing or the kettle whistling.

Then play back the noise you sampled as music.

Change pitch and tempo as you go up and down the scale.

Loop the sampled sound for a longer effect, making it St-st-stutter, or even add vibrato.

And that, musically, is just the beginning.

Because, on the Casio SK-1 you can add any of eight sounds already programmed into the machine to your sampled original, and beef it up with any one of eleven backing rhythms.

So you can get the cat or the kettle doing a disco number, laidback reggae or soulful blues.

The new SK-5 is even smarter:

It can record four different "Samples" which you can tap into music using its four Sample Pads.

And with the eight sounds already programmed, that gives you twelve sounds to play with.

It also has four built-in rhythm pads, for any extra beats, bangs and booms as you play.

The Casio SK-1 costs around £99 (RRP) the new SK-5 a mere £109 (RRP). Get your hands on a Casio Sampler at any one of the stores listed below.

You're guaranteed a lot of fun.

3 fantastic ideas!

hello, readers.....frank sidebottom here..! now....have you ever wondered what to do with your school books during the summer holidays?.....i know i do..! well, here are 3 fantastic ideas of things you can make with them so dont dare say you're bored this summer.....or else!....o.k.?

1. construct a full size galleon and set sail on the 7 seas.

2. put them on a shelf (in order?)

or 3,.. make your own little frank.

actually...you'd better use newspapers for this as i might get in big trouble if you use your school books.

first: rip up loads of paper to about the size of stamps.

2: go and buy a balloon from the shops and some wallpaper glue.

4: pop the balloon, then knock a nail into a stick inside.

5: cut a nose and ears out of card and stick on with a couple more layers.

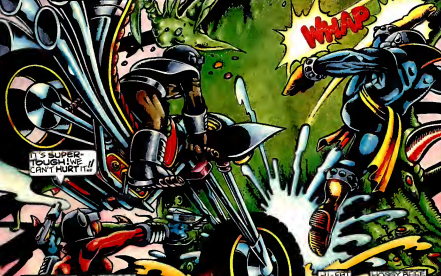

6: paint the face and make a body out of a big piece of card and there's "little frank" and last: puppets must be told off a very very lot.

FLOP OF THE CLASS

HEAD CASE!

I am a 41 year-old headmaster and an avid reader of 'Oink!'. I particularly admire BANX, and have a strong empathy with Mr. Bignose. I also read 'The Independent' and 'The Times Educational Supplement', but they don't make me laugh.

T.E. Haxell, Suffolk.

Very nice letter. 10 out of 10 for handwriting, 10 out of 10 for spelling, 0 out of 10 for honesty (nobody that nice could really be a headmaster, could they?).

—Uncle Pigg.

Next time teachers tell you off for reading 'Oink!' in class, tell 'em you're studying to be an intellectual, like pig-pal Sean Connor who is working on 'Oink!' as part of an 'Ideas in Society' course for his B.A. in Humanities at Bristol Polytechnic!

—Uncle Pigg, B.A.(Butcher 'Ater).

ART LESSON

Dear Uncle Pigg - My age is 11. I know I'm young, but I'm a good drawer. Please give me a job as a cartoonist.

Here's some of my work.
—Adam White, Sedgley.

P.S. I have a cartoonist's pen.

Dear Adam - Your drawings are great, but you'll have to finish school before you can apply for a job with me. As you're such a good drawer, I know you won't mind me asking you to shut up for a while.

—Uncle Pigg.
P.S. Give the pen back to the cartoonist, immediately!
